

Dress is the commonly seen article; however, to a certain extent, it represents the economy power and train of cultural thought of a region. In the past, gown and Chinese jacket were the most common dress for men in Qing Dynasty; and Manchu ladies would dress Chi-pao. Women of Hans would dress coats, skirts and mantles. Ladies from the rich family must dress skirts. Now they could dress any kind at ease without too many constraints. However, the patterns of two generations are still quite different.
